

Talent shout

Star-Tribune

November 14, 2004

A SERIOUS 'CYRANO'

From the moment he struts onstage and verbally undresses a pompous hack actor, Cyrano de Bergerac comes alive in the jaunty, soulful interpretation of actor Steve Hendrickson. Panache, that was Cyrano's game in Edmond Rostand's classic story, and Hendrickson expresses every shade of chivalry, gallantry, bravery, soulful sacrifice and regret. This lovely production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" by Ten Thousand Things refreshes an appreciation for Rostand's elegance in the telling of a character who demurs from the woman he loves and then selflessly provides the words for another man to woo her. Hendrickson, pictured here with Sonja Parks, never leaves the center of our imagination and appreciation.

Graydon Royce